

THE RIGHTS OF MIGRANTS

in the United States

All Migrants Have a Right to:

SAFETY AND SECURITY: The right to life and personal security.¹

HUMANE TREATMENT IN DETENTION: The right to be treated with respect and dignity while in detention.²

EQUAL PROTECTION AND DUE PROCESS: Equality before the law, freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention, and the right to a fair trial.³

ASYLUM: The right to seek safety in other countries from persecution.⁴

FAMILY UNITY: Legal migrants have a right to reunification with spouses and children in an expeditious manner.⁵

NON-DISCRIMINATION: The right to live free from discrimination, especially on the basis of national origin.⁶

FREEDOM FROM SLAVERY: The right to be free from slavery, servitude, and other forms of involuntary work.⁷

JUST WORKING CONDITIONS: Access to fair wages, a decent living, and workplace standards of safety, leisure, and health equivalent to U.S. citizens.⁸

CULTURAL CONTINUITY: The right to enjoy their own culture, to practice their religion of choice, and to use their own language.⁹

EDUCATION: Equal access to K-12 education without regard to the citizenship status of parents or children.¹⁰

HEALTH CARE: Medical care necessary for health and well-being, especially care that is urgently required for the preservation of life or the avoidance of irreparable harm to health.¹¹

HOUSING: Access to adequate housing, without segregation or discrimination.¹²

WHAT IS A MIGRANT?

A migrant is “any person who lives temporarily or permanently in a country where he or she was not born...”¹³ Migrants leave one place for another in search of a decent living or better education, to flee persecution, or simply to be close to family or friends.

Migration is an ancient and natural human response to hunger, deprivation, persecution, war, or natural disaster. Today, most governments regulate their borders and govern who enters or leaves the country. Migrants are classified based on their intent and the manner in which they enter a country. Tourists, business travelers, students, temporary workers, asylum seekers, refugees, permanent residents, and undocumented migrants all are part of the worldwide migrant population. In 2010, an estimated 214 million people lived outside their country of birth.¹⁴ Approximately 37 million migrants live in the United States.¹⁵

WHAT ARE THE RIGHTS OF MIGRANTS?

International human rights apply to all human beings, regardless of immigration status. Everyone – citizen or migrant, documented or undocumented – enjoys basic human rights such as the right to life, liberty, and security of person; freedom from slavery or torture; the right to equal protection of the law and freedom from discrimination; freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention; the presumption of innocence; and the right to freedom of association, religion, and expression.

These human rights are protected by international treaties, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR). Several treaties specifically address the human rights of migrants, including the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Their Families. These treaties outline rights of particular importance to migrants, including due process, family reunification, and asylum.

DOES U.S. LAW RECOGNIZE THE RIGHTS OF MIGRANTS?

The U.S. Constitution guarantees most rights for all people in the United States, whether citizens or migrants, documented or undocumented. These include equal protection under the law, the right to due process, freedom from unlawful search and seizure, and the right to fair criminal proceedings, among many others. Other U.S. laws, such as those governing immigration proceedings, also grant rights to migrants.

The U.S. is also bound by international treaties such as the ICCPR, the Refugee Convention and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD), all of which grant basic human rights to all people, including migrants.

IS THE U.S. FULFILLING THE RIGHTS OF MIGRANTS?

Despite the commitments made in international and domestic law, the U.S. system often fails to protect the human rights of migrants. Certain domestic laws discriminate between citizens and migrants, or between documented and undocumented migrants, especially in the provision of basic social services. Migrants encounter prejudice and intimidation in the workplace and in society at large; unequal access to basic services such as health care, housing, and education; arbitrary infringement of their civil liberties; and the denial of their fundamental right to due process.

Safety and Security

U.S. domestic law protects migrants against violence and intimidation, but in recent years, the extreme and often racist rhetoric surrounding immigration issues has increased the threats migrants face to their personal safety. According to the FBI, 11% of all hate crimes in 2008 were based on the national origin of the victim.¹⁶ In other areas, the U.S. also has trouble guaranteeing the safety of migrants. Migrant women are more susceptible to domestic violence and sexual assault than citizens, since they are often unable to report the abuse due to language barriers,

Last updated August 2010

social isolation, lack of financial resources, or fear of deportation. In one recent study, 48% of battered Latinas reported increased abuse from their partners after arriving in the United States.¹⁷

U.S. border enforcement policies and the lack of legal entry options have placed migrants in mortal danger along the Mexico/United States border. The dangers migrants risk in crossing the increasingly militarized border are known to the United States, yet the government has failed to minimize the threats to safety. Instead, deployment of heavy security near population centers has pushed migrant flows to more treacherous and remote corridors where they are dependent on smugglers, increasing the risk of death. Between 365 and 725 migrants died in 2008 as a result of these border enforcement policies.¹⁸

Humane Treatment in Detention

The U.S. lacks mandatory standards for immigration detention facilities, and as a result, migrants are frequently denied their rights to necessary medical care and humane conditions of detention. Virtually all immigrant detainees are held in prison-like settings, wear prison uniforms, are regularly shackled during transport and in their hearings, and are mingled with convicted people. Immigrants in detention may be held for prolonged periods of time without access to the outdoors. Appropriate psychological and medical services for torture survivors are universally unavailable.¹⁹ Between 2003 and April 2009, Immigration and Customs Enforcement reported over 90 deaths of non-citizens in their custody, many as a result of denied medical care or suicide.²⁰ Temporary holding facilities are even worse, with some holding cells essentially large cages in the desert, while in other cases, migrants are held on buses with inadequate food, water, and medical care.²¹

Equal Protection and Due Process

All people in the U.S. have the right to due process and equal protection under the U.S. Constitution. Under immigration law, however, many migrants are subject to mandatory detention and to deportation without a hearing, even when they are lawfully present in the United States.²² Over 30,000 people in 2009 were deported without ever appearing before an immigration judge to plead the specific facts of their case.²³ Many migrants are also detained, sometimes for months, without an individual hearing on whether they can be safely released, including asylum seekers who are fleeing government persecution and torture.²⁴

Immigrants are also denied their right to effective representation. While U.S. law provides that migrants facing deportation have “the privilege of being represented,” representation must be “at no expense to the Government.” In 2008, approximately 57% of all deportation cases were unrepresented, which limits the ability of migrants to present compelling cases on why they should be allowed to stay, especially given the complexities of the immigration system.²⁵ Migrants with mental disabilities face even greater odds, since the immigration system routinely fails to take into account their competency to stand trial, even when they do not understand the charges being brought against them.²⁶

Asylum

Though the U.S. has ratified the Refugee Convention, certain policies in the asylum and refugee system deny protection to migrants who would face persecution or death if returned to their country of origin. U.S. law denies asylum to migrants who fail to file their claims within one year of arriving, which penalizes those most in need of protection such as survivors of torture who struggle with memory loss, PTSD, depression, and other barriers to quickly applying for asylum.²⁷ The U.S. also defines the risk of being tortured very narrowly, denying protection to many at-risk people.²⁸ Finally, the U.S. bars individuals who have provided support to terrorist groups, but the definition is so broad that it covers peaceful political speech, assistance provided under coercion or threat of force, and even association with groups that support U.S. policies such as anti-Taliban fighters or Kurdish groups that fought against Saddam Hussein.²⁹

Family Unity

The right to maintain the unity of a family is one of the most fundamental human rights. The U.S. recognizes this by granting special preference to family members of immigrants who wish to join them in the United States. However, in practice, a strict quota system combined with slow processing times has led to an enormous backlog of visa applications – almost 3.5 million.³⁰ As a result, migrants have waited years – and sometime decades – before being reunited with family members. The U.S. also does not take into account family unity when enforcing immigration laws, detaining and deporting family members without considering the impact on families left behind. Over 1 million family members were separated by deportation between 1997 and 2007.³¹ United States law also establishes high penalties for unlawfully residing in the United States, forcing immigrants who may have entered illegally to spend up to 10 years apart from family members even after acquiring a pathway to legal status.³²

Non-discrimination

Though both U.S. laws and international treaties protect people from discriminatory treatment on the basis of ethnicity or national origin, migrants are often denied these protections. In many cases, immigration officials and local police rely almost entirely on Hispanic ethnicity to justify stopping, questioning, searching, and detaining suspected undocumented migrants.³³ In Texas, allowing local police to enforce immigration laws led to a sharp increase in the numbers of Hispanics detained on minor misdemeanor charges compared to other races, even though most of those arrested turned out to be lawfully present in the United States.³⁴ After September 11, 2001, Arab and Muslim Americans were also victims of discrimination.

www.EnergyofaNation.org

A website dedicated to providing accurate information about immigration.

The FBI questioned thousands of men of Middle Eastern descent despite having no evidence of their involvement in terrorist activity or even immigration violations, while new immigration policies target migrants from Middle Eastern and Muslim countries even when there is no evidence that the migrant poses a risk.³⁵

Freedom from Forced Labor

Both undocumented and documented immigrants can be victims of forced labor. The H-2 guestworker program allows people to enter the U.S. legally for temporary seasonal employment. Once here, these workers are vulnerable to exploitation and enslavement, including stolen wages, seizure of identity documents, poor living conditions, and denial of medical care for workplace injuries.³⁶ Many undocumented migrants end up in forced labor situations as a result of human trafficking. While the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 was created to reduce trafficking violations, many victims are too afraid of their traffickers to report the crime and less than one percent of cases are solved annually.³⁷

Just and Favorable Working Conditions

Migrants to the U.S. face serious barriers to economic prosperity and favorable working conditions. On average, migrants have median weekly earnings that are less than 80% of the earnings of native-born Americans.³⁸ Many of the industries in which immigrants work, particularly in the agricultural and domestic services sectors, are excluded from minimum wage, overtime, trade union, and occupational health and safety laws. Employers also use the threat of deportation and workplace raids to discourage undocumented migrants and their co-workers from reporting labor law violations.³⁹

Cultural Continuity

The rights of individuals to enjoy their own culture and to practice the religion of their choosing are core American principles, and are generally well protected under the Constitution. The right of migrants to their own language, however, is under threat. Currently, at least 26 states have passed constitutional amendments or statutes declaring English to be the official language and limiting the circumstances in which other languages can be used for government business.⁴⁰ At the federal level, repeated efforts have been made to ban the use of non-English languages for official purposes, in violation of U.S. obligations under the ICCPR.

Education

Though migrant children enroll in elementary and high school at about the same rate as citizen children, they have worse educational outcomes. In most states, English Language Learners score between 30-40 percentage points lower than their classmates on national assessments.⁴¹ In addition, undocumented migrant children are denied equal access to higher education in the United States. Under a 1996 federal immigration law, states are discouraged from providing in-state tuition, work-study, or financial aid to undocumented migrants. As a result, only 5-10% of undocumented migrants currently receive any post-secondary schooling.⁴² These children, who have often lived and attended school in the U.S. for most of their lives, face limited job opportunities because they lack a college degree.

Health Care

Migrants suffer from unequal access to both health insurance and health care. Most legal migrants who have been in the U.S. for less than 5 years, as well as undocumented migrants, are denied access to federally-funded health insurance programs such as Medicaid. As a result, 47% of non-citizens are uninsured as compared to 15% of citizens.⁴³ In addition, many states have statutory bans on providing non-emergency health care to undocumented migrants. As a result of these restrictions, migrants are far less likely to receive health care than citizens. A recent study found that 25% of migrants had not seen a doctor in the past 2 years compared to only 10% of citizens.⁴⁴

Housing

Migrants suffer from discrimination in their access to housing. Local governments use housing regulations to prevent migrants from moving to their area, either by targeting immigrant residency patterns, such as large or extended-kin households, or by requiring verification of legal status before buying a home or renting an apartment.⁴⁵ Between 2005 and 2007, thirty municipalities across the country made it a criminal offense to rent apartments to undocumented migrants.⁴⁶ Landlords and real estate agents also discriminate against migrants, discouraging them from living in particular areas or creating higher barriers for migrants who want to rent or purchase a home. Hispanic renters, for instance, were found to face discrimination in housing in 25% of cases studied by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.⁴⁷

U.S. Government Obligations

To ensure the rights of migrants, the United States has the following obligations:

RESPECT:

Governments must not deprive any migrant of their rights under domestic and international law and must refrain from taking retrogressive measures that are incompatible with the rights of migrants.

PROTECT:

Governments must take measures to prevent individuals or third parties, such as employers or civil society organizations, from interfering in any way with the realization of the rights of migrants.

FULFILL:

Governments must adopt necessary measures and create an enabling environment such that all migrants can enjoy their full rights.

MEET MINIMUM

STANDARDS: Governments must ensure the satisfaction of the minimal, but essential, standard laid out in the UDHR and immediately address extreme situations of abuse.

NON-DISCRIMINATION:

Governments must work to prevent discriminatory outcomes due to class, race, gender, language, or other factors, in order to ensure equity in the fulfillment of the rights of migrants.

PROTECT MOST

VULNERABLE: Governments must actively reach out to the most frequently marginalized and excluded communities, who face the greatest barriers in realizing their rights as migrants.

MONITOR AND REPORT:

Governments must monitor and report on their fulfillment of the rights of migrants and ensure accountability for their actions and inactions.

ENDNOTES: The Rights of Migrants in the United States Fact Sheet

1. Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). Accessed at <http://www.un.org/en/documents/udhr/>
2. Article 6 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). Accessed at <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/ccpr.htm>.
3. Article 10 of the ICCPR.
4. Articles 6, 7, 9, 10 & 11 of the UDHR; Articles 9, 13, 14, 15 & 16 of the ICCPR.
5. 5th, 6th and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution. Accessed at <http://topics.law.cornell.edu/constitution/billofrights#amendmenti>.
6. Article 14 of the UDHR.
7. Convention on the Status of Refugees. Accessed at <http://www.unhcr.org/3b66c2aa10.pdf>.
8. Article 16 of the UDHR; Article 23 of the ICCPR.
9. Article 44 of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Accessed at <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/cmw.htm>.
10. Article 2 of the UDHR; Articles 2 & 26 of the ICCPR; 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.
11. Article 4 of the UDHR; Article 8 of the ICCPR.
12. Articles 23 & 24 of the UDHR.
13. Article 27 of the ICCPR.
14. Article 26 of the UDHR; Article 30 of the Migrant Workers Convention.
15. Article 25 of the UDHR; Article 28 of the Migrant Workers Convention.
16. Article 25 of the UDHR.
17. "Migrant." United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.unesco.org/new/en/social-and-human-sciences/themes/social-transformations/international-migration/glossary/migrant/>.
18. "Trends in International Migrant Stock: The 2008 Revision." United Nations Population Division (2009). Accessed August 2010 at <http://esa.un.org/migration/>.
19. "Selected Characteristics of the Native and Foreign-Born Populations." 2006-2008 American Community Survey 3-Year Estimates. Accessed August 2010 at http://factfinder.census.gov/servlet/STTable?_bm=y&-geo_id=01000US&-qr_name=ACS_2008_3YR_G00_S0501&-ds_name=ACS_2008_3YR_G00.
20. "Table 1: Incidents, Offenses, Victims, and Known Offenders." 2008 Hate Crimes Statistics. Federal Bureau of Investigation, (November 2009). Accessed August 2010 at http://www.fbi.gov/ucr/hc2008/data/table_01.html.
21. "The Facts on Immigrant Women and Domestic Violence." Endabuse.org. Accessed August 2010 at http://endabuse.org/userfiles/file/Children_and_Families/Immigrant.pdf.
22. Jimenez, Maria. "Humanitarian Crisis: Migrant Deaths at the U.S.-Mexico Border." ACLU of San Diego and Imperial Counties and Mexico's National Commission of Human Rights (October 1, 2009). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.aclu.org/files/pdfs/immigrants/humanitariancrisisreport.pdf>.
23. "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers. Submission to the United Nations Universal Periodic Review." The Advocates for Human Rights. Accessed August 2010 at http://www.mnadvocates.org/uploads/ref_asy_skr_mig_cluster_us_upr_final_2.pdf. Paragraph 30.
24. "Immigration and Customs Enforcement, List of Detainee Deaths Since October 2003." The New York Times. Accessed August 2010 at http://graphics8.nytimes.com/packages/pdf/nyregion/ICE_FOIA2.pdf.
25. "Crossing the Line: Human Rights Abuses of Migrants in Short-Term Custody on the Arizona/Sonora Border." No More Deaths (September 17, 2008). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.nomoredeaths.org/View-document-details/9-Crossing-The-Line-Human-Rights-Abuses-of-Migrants-in-Short-term-Custody.html>.
26. "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers," paragraphs 22 & 27 (see note 19).
27. FY2011 Budget in Brief. U.S. Dept. of Homeland Security. Accessed August 2010 at http://www.dhs.gov/xlibrary/assets/budget_bib_fy2011.pdf.
28. "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers." (see note 19).
29. "Executive Summary." Reforming the Immigration System: Proposals to Promote Independence, Fairness, Efficiency, and Professionalism in the Adjudication of Removal Cases. American Bar Association Commission on Immigration (February 2010). Accessed August 2010 at <http://new.abanet.org/Immigration/PublicDocuments/ReformingtheImmigrationSystemExecutiveSummary.pdf>.
30. "Deportation by Default: Mental Disability, Unfair Hearings and Indefinite Detention in the US Immigration System." Human Rights Watch and ACLU (July 2010). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.hrw.org/en/reports/2010/07/26/deportation-default-0>.
31. INA § 208(a)(2)(B) ; see also "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers," paragraph 33 (see note 19).
32. "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers," paragraph 36 (see note 19).
33. "Denial and Delay: The Impact of the Immigration Law's "Terrorism Bars" on Asylum Seekers and Refugees in the United States." Human Rights First (November 2009). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.humanrightsfirst.info/pdf/RPP-DenialandDelay-FULL-111009-web.pdf>.
34. "Annual Report of Immigrant Visa Applicants in the Family-sponsored and Employment-based preferences Registered at the National Visa Center as of November 1, 2009." Department of State. Accessed August 2010 at <http://travel.state.gov/pdf/WaitingListItem.pdf>.
35. "Forced Apart (By the Numbers): Non-Citizens Deported Mostly for Nonviolent Offenses." Human Rights Watch (April 15, 2009). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.hrw.org/en/reports/2009/04/15/forced-apart-numbers-0>.
36. "Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Seekers." (see note 19).
37. "The Persistence Of Racial And Ethnic Profiling In The United States: A Follow-Up Report To The U.N. Committee On The Elimination Of Racial Discrimination." ACLU and Rights Working Group (June 29, 2009). Accessed August 2010 at http://www.aclu.org/human-rights_racial-justice/persistence-racial-and-ethnic-profiling-united-states.
38. Gardner, Trevor and Aarti Kohli. "The C.A.P. Effect: Racial Profiling in the ICE Criminal Alien Program." The Warren Institute (September 2009). Accessed August 2010 at http://www.law.berkeley.edu/files/policybrief_irving_FINAL.pdf.
39. "The Persistence, in the United States, of Discriminatory Profiling Based on Race, Ethnicity, Religion and National Origin. Submission to the United Nations Universal Periodic Review." U.S. Human Rights Network. Accessed August 2010 at http://www.ushrnetwork.org/sites/default/files/Racial_Profiling_Joint_Report_USA.pdf.
40. "Close to Slavery: Guestworker Programs in the United States." Southern Poverty Law Center (March 2007). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.splcenter.org/get-informed/publications/close-to-slavery-guestworker-programs-in-the-united-states>.
41. "Human Trafficking Statistics." Polaris Project (2009). Accessed at <http://nhtrc.polarisproject.org/materials/Human-Trafficking-Statistics.pdf>.
42. "Foreign-born Workers: Labor Force Characteristics - 2009." Bureau of Labor Statistics (March 19, 2010). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.bls.gov/news.release/pdf/forbrn.pdf>.
43. "Migrant Labor Rights. Submission to the United Nations Universal Periodic Review." U.S. Human Rights Network. Accessed August 2010 at http://www.ushrnetwork.org/sites/default/files/Migrant_Labor_Joint_Report_USA.pdf.
44. "Language Legislation in the U.S.A." Language Policy (2008). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.languagepolicy.net/archives/langleg.htm>.
45. Chudowsky, Naomi and Victor Chudowsky. "State Test Score Trends Through 2007-08, Part 6: Has Progress Been Made in Raising Achievement for English Language Learners?" Center on Education Policy (April 7, 2010). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.cep-dc.org/document/docWindow.cfm?fuseaction=document.viewDocument&documentid=305&documentFormatId=4640>.
46. "Dreams Deferred: The Costs of Ignoring Undocumented Students." Immigration Policy Center (October 18, 2007). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.immigrationpolicy.org/sites/default/files/docs/Access%20to%20Higher%20Ed%209-25%20FINAL.pdf>.
47. "Five Basic Facts on Immigrants and Their Health Care." Kaiser Commission on Medicaid and the Uninsured (March 2008). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.kff.org/medicaid/upload/7761.pdf>.
48. "Five Basic Facts on Immigrants and Their Health Care." (see note 43).
49. Esbenshade, Jill. "Division and Dislocation: Regulating Immigration Through Local Housing Ordinances." Immigration Policy Center (Summer 2007). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.immigrationpolicy.org/sites/default/files/docs/IPC%20Special%20Report%20PR.pdf>.
50. Belson, Ken and Jill P. Capuzzo. "Towns Rethink Laws Against Illegal Immigrants." The New York Times (September 26, 2007). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.nytimes.com/2007/09/26/nyregion/26riverside.html?pagewanted=all>.
51. "Discrimination in Metropolitan Housing Markets: National Results from Phase 1, Phase 2, and Phase 3 of the Housing Discrimination Study (HDS)." Department of Housing and Urban Development (March 30, 2005). Accessed August 2010 at <http://www.huduser.org/publications/hsgfin/hds.html>.